Although there is no information to support such an attack, it is worth reminding ourselves that it is in effect impossible to ensure that our own and others' personal data, financial data and data from other online communities will not be compromised. Information about any specific individual or a specific website could contain personally identifiable information (PII) about any of us. That means anyone reading the information could become a potential victim to this kind of attack; however, the risk of PII leakage from that data is minuscule compared to even minimal risk from a data breach.. How can I protect my information from falling into the wrong hands? What do I do when an online network becomes compromised on my behalf?.
